THERE are many people that are held in higher esteem by the Atlanta Constitution than Mr. Cleveland, but that paper joins in the general favorable comment upon the President's message. The Constitution says: "There will be no disposition in this section at least to criticize or object to the tone and spirit of Mr. Cleveland's message."

It will doubtless prove offensive to the Tories whose commercial instincts have abolished all patriotic impulses from their mind, but the great body of the people will enthusiastically approve the firm stand Mr. Cleveland has taken."

THE MONROE DOCTRINE.
What is it? It is the principle embodied in the following extract from President Monroe's message to Congress in December, 1823:

"We owe, therefore, it to candor and to the amicable relations existing between the United States and the allied powers to declare that we should consider any attempt on their part to extend their system to any portion of this Hemisphere as dangerous to our peace and safety."

With the existing colonies or dependencies of any European power we have not interfered and shall not interfere, but with the governments who have declared their independence and maintained it, and whose independence we have, on great consideration and just principles, acknowledged, we could not view an interposition for the purpose of oppressing them or controlling in any other manner their destiny [by any European power] in any other light than as a manifestation of an unfriendly disposition toward the United States."

ANOTHER MESSAGE.

The persistent adherence of the administration to the policy of paying obligations in gold only that were, under the law, payable in both or either gold and silver, has plunged the government into another hole, and the President, by special message, appeals to Congress for help.

He says "the real and sensible cure for our recurring troubles can only be effected by a complete change in our financial scheme." This is very true, but involves time. So, the President urges Congress not to take a recess until it has done something to "prevent, in a time of fear and apprehension, any sacrifice of the people's interest and the public funds, or the impairment of our public credit, in an effort by executive action to relieve the dangers of the present emergency."

Just what Congress should do is not indicated by the President, but he thinks it urgently imperative that some action should be taken to prevent loss of confidence in the government.

The message in full will be found in our news columns today.

THEIR IRISH UP.

Appropos of the possible conflict between the United States and England, the executive council of the Irish National Alliance has issued a manifesto, from which the following extracts are taken:

"We declare it incontrovertible that no more bitter more perfidious or more unrelenting enemy than Great Britain to the United States has ever existed. England has ever been the vengeful foe of American liberty and Republican institutions."

"Imbued with this conviction and seeing that Great Britain has avowed her intention to trample upon the Monroe doctrine by her attempt to rob Venezuela of her territory, and has dared to violate the integrity of our territory in Alaska, we hereby offer as a proof of our loyalty and devotion to the country of which we are citizens to place at the disposal of the President of the United States, without delay, 100,000 soldiers, as brave as ever shouldered a rifle, and every man of the value of the principles and teachings of the Irish National Alliance."

"Our army, which is now organized, is ready to serve the American Republic in any part of this continent, and should the enforcement of the Monroe doctrine need its aid, will, either on Irish soil or on English ground, establish the fact that the integrity of the value of the principles and teachings of the Irish National Alliance is to create the opportunity which will enable us to drive the British enemy from Ireland as it was driven from the United States."

"As to our relations with England, we have no apologies to make, no excuses to offer. Should it be possible to embroil her with any power on earth we shall not hesitate to do so. The chief object of the Irish National Alliance is to create the opportunity which will enable us to drive the British enemy from Ireland as it was driven from the United States."

"We agree with the Charlotte Observer in commending 'this decision to some of the gentlemen who have lately been elevated to the bench in North Carolina.'"

The Observer remarks, further: "In one case in this State a judgment for contempt has been entered against a newspaper for a respectful criticism of the court on the occasion of the removal of a case from one county to another, and in another case an editor has been threatened with contempt proceedings for committing the error of the slightest inaccuracy in his report of the disposition of a case. In neither case was the legality of the proceeding or the integrity of the judge called into question. If the law is to be maintained, the press as to any action of a court would be silenced and there would be nothing between the people and judicial tyranny."

Then it might be a dangerous thing for a newspaper to criticize a judge who would stuff cotton in his ears shut out the earnest pleadings of a Kope Elias, or who would leave the court with a head to step out and smoke his pipe.

The thing might run to seed, too, and it might be made a case of contempt if the papers should say anything about a Solicitor if he should get drunk while on duty, or if he should be indicted for gambling, or for breaking any other law of the State.

Give us clear-headed, impartial and conscientious Judges, and clean-handed, upright and law-abiding Solicitors, but don't muzzle the press so it cannot speak out if some curious turn in political affairs should happen to inflict us with the other sort.

LOOKS LIKE WAR.

If any one doubted the President's position as to the Monroe doctrine all ground for doubting has been removed by his special message to Congress upon the Venezuelan boundary question. The message shows firmness and vigor and, at the same time, prudence and calmness, and will, probably, be more generally applauded by the people of all sections of the Union than any State paper yet issued by the present Executive. While mindful of the rights of others it breathes the spirit of adherence to the rights of the United States, with an unmistakeable hint that the people of this country, knowing their rights dare maintain them.

It means that if the President's ideas are backed by Congress, England will have a skirmish on her hands if she does not recede from her proposition to lay violent hands upon a territory to which she has no claim.

The trend of the President's mind as to the Monroe doctrine may be seen from the following extract from this special message:

"It may not be amiss to suggest that the doctrine upon which we stand strong and sound because its enforcement is important to our peace and safety as a nation and is essential to the integrity of our free institutions and tranquil maintenance of our distinctive form of government. It was intended to apply to every stage of our national life and cannot become obsolete while our republic endures. If the balance of power is justly a cause for anxious consideration among the governments of the Old World, and a subject for our absolute non-interference, none the less is an observance of the Monroe doctrine of vital concern to our people and their government."

Arbitration of the disputed question having been proposed by the United States and rejected by England, the President now takes the precaution to recommend the appointment by this government of a commission to determine what is the true divisional line between Venezuela and British Guiana. As to what may follow the report of this commission may be surmised from the following paragraph from the message:

"In case such report is made and accepted, it will, in my opinion, be the duty of the United States to resist, by every means in its power, as a willful aggression upon its rights and interests, the appropriation by Great Britain of any lands, or the exercise of governmental jurisdiction over any territory, after an investigation, we have determined of right to belong to Venezuela."

That the President realizes that a defence of the Monroe doctrine may lead to war with England is shown by the concluding words of his message, which are as follows:

"I am making these recommendations I am fully alive to the responsibility incurred and keenly realize the consequences that may follow. I am, nevertheless, firm in my conviction that while it is a grievous wrong to contemplate the two great English speaking peoples of the world as being at odds, and that friendly competitors in the forward march of civilization and strenuous and worthy rivals in all the arts of peace, there is no calamity which a great nation can inflict upon itself, and which follows a supine submission to wrong and injustice and the consequent loss of national self respect and honor beneath which is shielded and defended a people's safety and greatness."

Our Trade With England.

The trade relations between the United States and England are closer than those of any other two countries in the world. In an average year England buys about as much of our exported commodities as all the other countries of the world combined. While we are thus dependent on British consumption for a market, without which the agricultural producers of the West and Southwestern business supplied by them would be bankrupted, England is even more dependent on us. Our raw cotton and food products are its life. If they were cut off English workmen would be thrown out of employment by the hundred thousand and every English city would be filled with starving and desperate men bent on discussing foreign and domestic affairs with Lord Salisbury. It is not with England merely a question of a market for her exports, for with the American supply of food stopped she could not feed her population. Even her mills could continue to run without our cotton, the loss of American food would mean famine.

An Astonishing Result.

From the Atlanta Journal.

The niplg parison that the cause of woman's suffrage is gaining ground in this country will be seriously modified by the result of the election in Massachusetts at which the question was passed upon. The overwhelming defeat of the idea is more fully demonstrated by the official returns of the election. There were 575,000 women in the State entitled to register and vote upon the suffrage question, and yet the returns show that only 23,067 women went to the polls, and of these many voted against the amendment.

There were forty-seven towns in which not a woman cast a vote and in one hundred and thirty-eight towns the woman vote averaged only fifteen.

The suffrage amendment did not receive a majority in a single county or district in the State.

Only 3 per cent. of the women in Massachusetts cared to vote on the question.

Old Time Christmas Dishes.

In the parlor of the Plum porridge was paraded at the beginning of the dinner, occupying the soup course, and the mince or shred pie were ever popular. In shape they are oval, slightly oval as well as round, and are granulated with this oval shape was to resemble and remind us of Christ's cradle. In England it is still a very popular and enjoyable custom to offer a mince pie to every caller, for every pie eaten under a different roof represents a happy month of the coming year. When the 12 have become an old acquaintance, then one hears, "I've eaten my 12, so kindly excuse me."

YOU MAY BE A VICTOR.

New York Herald.

Be strong, and quit yourselves like men. Samuel, IV, 9.

It seems that we need a more constant encouragement in our religious life. Religion is in itself the most cheering thing in the world, and if any one takes a gloomy view of the world, he should turn to his religion and find in it the light and the joy that he needs.

It is not easily explained, perhaps, but the fact stares us in the face that it is much easier to coast down hill than to draw the sled up hill, and sometimes become disheartened.

Still, we once in awhile get a glimpse of the reason for this. We know full well from both observation and personal experience that it is easier to coast down hill than to draw the sled up hill, and if there were no climbing up hill to be done, we should be little better than the sleds which bear us. There must be a struggle, and we should be as vigorous and healthy. The up hill work is what makes the man.

The plan of life, therefore, has been so arranged that no one can have the short pleasure of coasting down hill without the long labor of dragging his sled up hill.

A youth must be continually reminded of these facts, for he is disinclined to very early stage that harmful habits are contracted. A few months which cannot be eliminated in years. He must therefore become a philosopher or he will be ultimately ruined, for philosophy will teach him to resist only a few months which cannot be eliminated in years. He must therefore become a philosopher or he will be ultimately ruined, for philosophy will teach him to resist only a few months which cannot be eliminated in years.

There is nothing on the planet so majestic as a whole and perfect human soul. The angels of heaven who sang their hallelujahs before the world was an inferior order of beings, because the perfection which is the reward of perfection is greater than the perfection which any of the immortals can be endowed. I believe, therefore, that when we get into the other life the angels will be numbered and won the prize by their endurance and will stand on a higher level than any other creature, and the soul that has borne the ills of time in the spirit of the world will stand nearest to the throne of God.

But it is not easy to endure. The school of life is a school of discipline, and many fall by the way. So far as God has spoken, however, He has used the word of discipline. And the words of Christ are full of pity for those who are down hearted, and of good cheer for those who are simply the strength from the Most High, or an expression of gratitude for what has already been received. In prayer the human heart comes into contact with God, and by a law, the working of which is mysterious, because our minds are not yet open, such contact results in an accession of ability which is palpable to those who have availed themselves of this privilege.

Whoever you may be, whatever station of life you may occupy, however adverse may be your surroundings, you can earn a right to God's approval. Every one who has riches, because riches make largely on laws which man has made, but every one can have heaven. The present time is short, but the future is long. To the battle ships more do your work well and tomorrow your toil will be rewarded.

Possibly you may be suffering the pangs of poverty. Envy creeps into the heart, and you realize that others are surrounded by luxuries as well as comforts, and the envy is a knife-driven into the maple tree which lets the sap run out. We must not let this envy lead us to sin. Wealth is an accident of some lives and not in others, but nobility may be had by all. The richest are not the happiest, for happiness comes from the soul, not from the pocketbook. The Sultan may wear a crown, but he is wretched; the peasant who digs his field for food to eat has more enjoyment and more content. Not outside, but inside is peace.

Or possibly you have fallen on evil ways and habit has made you a slave. God knows you have a hard stint to do before sundown, but you are a man, and the devil is a mortal soul conquered by a habit in a sorry spectacle; a king dragged at the chariot tail is a strange humiliation. But victory may yet be wrested from defeat. You and God can do great things together. Lift up your head and let the angels put shoulders to the wheel it can be lifted out of the mire. Recall the forgotten fact that you are a man, blow a blast on the trumpet of defiance, and the proclamation of your own freedom, and do brave battle with yourself. The hosts of the skies are on your side, and though the struggle will tax your whole strength, begin it now and keep it up till you have conquered every entrenched tendency to evil. I somehow think that he who has been lowest in this world and fought his way to manhood through legions of devils will stand highest in the time to come, for did not Christ say, "Many that are last shall be first?"

Religion is another word for irrigation. The arid fields, overflowed by the vivifying stream, spring into fruitfulness, and souls parched with barrenness when touched by the spirit of God may bear forth a harvest that shall be garnered by the angels.

ADVERSE VIEWS.

Some Think the President Has Made a Great Mistake.

Abraham S. Hewitt.

There is nothing whatever in the Monroe doctrine, as originally promulgated, which requires the United States to interfere in any way in the dispute between Venezuela and Great Britain at this time. The idea that we have an interest in the territory which would warrant intervention, is foreclosed by the President's admission that if Venezuela should choose to take the disputed territory to Great Britain we should have no grievance.

New York Journal of Commerce.

Mr. Cleveland has made a most serious mistake. His policy in this matter is not only precipitate and untimely, it is madness itself. He has out-juggled the jingoes, and from being the embodiment of sober judgment he has become the hasty abettor of a political fanaticism.

In this inviting war he has not shown the discretion of providing a way of escape from that alternative. He would send his own commission to investigate the title of the boundary claims; such means as information as could be obtained would come from the Venezuelans, while the British side would be unrepresented; and the commission's verdict would consequently be such as to lead to threatened ejection of England from the country claimed by Venezuela.

The people will wait with profound interest to know whether Congress will sanction the President's recommendations. It is hardly necessary to consider what England may do under the circumstances. It is very unlikely that she would yield, and she will be shaken as she awaits the development of our action.

New York Post.

Their [Republican jingoes] surprise is great, now that they find him [Cleveland] the jingo in chief of the whole pack. We confess that our surprise is equal to theirs, and our sorrow is probably greater. We are grieved and shocked that any body holding the high office of President of the United States could play with the mighty issues of peace and war as a political game. We can see nothing else in it. The boundary dispute is a political game. The argument about the Monroe doctrine is too far-fetched. The consequences of war, on the other hand, are too monstrous. Its effect on the national character is too appalling, and its moral and material interests too disastrous and far-reaching. Deserving men will be made bankrupt by what has already happened. The national finances, already in a perilous position, will be ruined. The people will be shocked and will have not been since the civil war.
